

AOZ Studio Beta - Bug #701

The "Hello world!" program should NOT come up every time a new program is created.

Description
This has been a problem ever since the Hello World program was created. It should only come up once - when AOZ is first opened. After that, we should never see it again, unless we specifically open it! It's annoying to have to delete it - every time!

Really?!

For the first time, I understand - a learning process. Maybe even 2 or 3 times for those who are slow learners.

Beyond that, I can't imagine anyone wanting to see this again! That's just plain annoying!

If we're going to leave that in, we need a clear explanation in the manual of how to modify the default templates to get rid of this annoyance! ;-)

Re-tested in 1.0.0 (B8)

The "Hello world!" program is no longer coming up, however, some plain text is still coming up that will cause a program to fail if it is not removed. One problem has been exchanged for another. (If we're going to leave that text there, we need to make that a comment.

As with the "Hello World" program, IMO, this text should NOT come up... again, except, perhaps, the FIRST time AOZ is opened... and even then, it should be a comment.
